Military Boosts End of Year Construction Spending

The Army has given Hawaii's construction business a big, year-end shot in the arm with a last minute award worth $34,835,245. The job, awarded Dec. 29 to BCP Construction of Hawaii, is for construction and alterations to structures and facilities at the old Barber's Point Naval Air Station and will provide administration rooms, a work base and machine welding shops for the Hawaii National Guard.

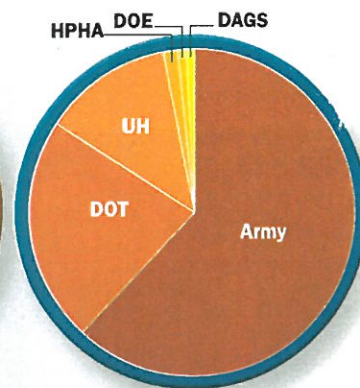

The job swells the total value of agency awards for December to $56,190,876, well above the previous year's December total of just under $7 million. Even with this boost, however, the grand total of $430,742,749 for agency work for the past year is still far short of 2010's banner year total of $1,056,555,072. But it does bode well for the Pacific region's potential for further military spending even in a year predicted to see large cuts in military spending.

The award winner, BCP Construction has been Hawaii based since 1981 and is currently winding down two projects; safety improvements at Aloha Stadium worth $18 million and renovations at McKinley High School worth $5 million.
